REVISTA LATINOAMERICANA DE DESARROLLO ECONÓMICO - LAJED

ADVERTISING AND DIRECT MARKETING POLICY

1. Advertising policy

The Revista Latinoamericana de Desarrollo Económico (LAJED) does not accept paid commercial advertising in its print or digital publications or on its website. This provision does not include editorial calls for papers, academic announcements, institutional information, or funding acknowledgments related to the journal's own activities.

Editorial decisions - including the selection, evaluation, acceptance, and publication of manuscripts - are independent of commercial, advertising, or funding considerations. No sponsor, funder, or external entity has authority to intervene in LAJED editorial decisions.

LAJED does not charge fees for submission, evaluation, editorial processing, or publication of articles (APC = 0), nor does it make payments to authors for publishing their contributions.

2. Direct marketing and manuscript solicitation policy

Calls for papers and manuscript solicitation are disseminated primarily through the following channels:

a) Open public calls for papers published on the journal website, with clearly specified submission deadlines and requirements.

b) Dissemination through the institutional social media channels of the Universidad Católica Boliviana and the Instituto de Investigaciones Socio-Económicas (IISEC).

c) Direct communications to the relevant academic community, including researchers, universities, academic departments, research centers, and scientific societies, inviting submission of manuscripts.

d) Participation in national and international conferences, seminars, and academic events.

The journal's calls for papers and communications comply with the following principles:

- They are truthful and contain no misleading promises regarding acceptance, publication timeframes, or indexing.
- They are directed to academic audiences relevant to LAJED's thematic scope.

- They do not use pressure tactics, artificial urgency, or indiscriminate mass communications.

- They faithfully represent the journal's identity, scope, and policies.

3. Editorial independence

LAJED is published by the Instituto de Investigaciones Socio-Económicas (IISEC) and the Carrera de Economía of the Universidad Católica Boliviana "San Pablo", Sede La Paz.

LAJED may finance its activities through institutional resources and, where appropriate, through funding or cooperation agreements compatible with its academic and editorial objectives. The existence of external funding sources will not condition editorial decisions.

Decisions on manuscripts will be based exclusively on academic and editorial criteria, such as quality, originality, relevance, methodological rigor, and thematic fit, in accordance with the peer review process established in the Editorial Policy and the applicable editorial procedure.
